Only Moderately Gay. Special Correspondence of The Evening Star.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I.

August 8, 1903. Narragansett is at last extremely active, but only moderately gay. Polo, which always crowns the season, began a week ago and is to continue ten days longer, at the end of which period the crowd will sweep along to Newport. The weather conditions for the opening games could not have been improved, but the playing frequently showed lamentable lack of keen work. That deficiency, however, is bound to grow less without regard to the tremendous handicaps that some of the clubs must overcome in order to win. No event of the year brings out as much local color and people who have never seen a polo game at the Point Judith Country Club have lost half of summer life at the Pier.

Last week's tennis tournament was the most successful for years, particularly in the number of entries and the widely scat-tered sections of the country represented. Members of the Point Judith Country Club are afraid, however, that the golf tourney will suffer in consequence of the revival of Dinner parties the past week at the Point Judith Country Club have been as thick as small strawberries at the bottom of a bas-ket. The trouble is the hotel contingent is almost entirely on the outside, just as it has been ever since the Casino was burned. What's more, the progress of the stock company, which is expected to put up another social clearing house, is discouraging-

All Ready for Carnival.

Special Correspondence of The Evening Star. ASBURY PARK, N. J., August 7, 1903. The carnival committee, after a series of deliberations for a period of six weeks, has chosen Miss Ethel Martin Jones to be queen of the carnival this year. Miss Jones is a pretty and decidedly attractive brunette and possesses much charm of manner. She is the daughter of Proprietor W. Harvey Jones of the Hotel Columbia, and is an Asbury Park girl. The selection of Miss Jones will mean that the chief social functions incident to the coronation ball and the masque fets will center in North Asbury Park, and the Hotel Co-lumbia will, of course, become temporarily her majesty's royal palace.

The lake carnival, which is to come off on Tuesday night of next week, will be one of the most attractive events of the summer season. The committeemen who engaged to raise a subscription for the affairs, secured nearly 1,000, a portion of which will be awarded as prizes to the most handsomely decorated barge and the nine other barges or boats more nearly approaching it in beauty. The other portion of the fund will be devoted to fireworks and lake decorations. The decorations will consist of two electrical foun-tains and a full rigged electrical ship. which is to be anchored in the middle

the lake. The annual bowling tournament at the Coleman House Casino's alleys has approached a crucial stage now, and but three weeks remain within which an opportunity is afforded to run up a score algher than 265, which is posted on the Society folks turned out tonight to attend the military euchre for the benefit of the Old Guard Armory fund. The Coleman House's large ball room was given over for the affair, and over 140 players engaged in the game. The prizes were of the The mid-week hop in the handsome Casino of the Coleman House was attended by the largest gathering of dancers thus far seen, except at the famous Saturday Tuesday evening has been set apart by the Hotel Brunswick's management for in-formal dances, and the attendance at these events is equal in number to the full-dress dances of Saturday.

The Berwin's patrons danced from 9 until the stroke of midnight on Wednesday evening. A dress dance was given at the Hotel Lafayette Wednesday evening, and the fes-tivity was kept up until 11:30, when punch and ices were served. The West End's patrons were entertained with dancing on two evenings this week, and the mid-season ball is scheduled for Saturday evening.

Dancing was in order at the St. Charles on Saturday last and also on Wednesday vening of this week. Progressive euchre entertained the guests at the Surf House on Wednesday evening.

Cards were in order at the Victoria on Thursday evening.
The Florida's guests danced until a late nour at their regular weekly hop Saturday A splendid orchestra has been engaged by the proprietors of the new Marlborough, and the weekly schedule of social festivities at the handsome house will include biweekly concerts and Wednesday and Saturday dances. The house was formally opened last Saturday, and a dance take place tonight. The Madison's patrons enjoyed a euchre party Wednesday evening.

Six prizes were awarded to the guests of the Hicks, who participated in the Wednesday evening progressive euchre.

J. Martin Miller of Wastington is numered among the recent arrivals at the St.

James.

Among the season guests at the Plaza are Mrs. Money and her daughter, Miss Mabel Clare Money of Washington. Mrs. Money is the wife of United States Senator Money of Mississippi.

James D. Henderson of Washington is domiciled at Moss Side Villa for a protracted stay. He is accompanied by his cousins, Miss Marguerite Early and Wm. Early of Baltimore.

Troops H and E, joining the squadron of the 2d United States Cavalry, which encamped with the District Guard at Leesburg, had been away from their regular post for almost a month when they returned last Sunday. All of that time had teen spent in the field, more than half of it on the march. These two troops were well officered and equipped for such duty The organization was under the command of Maj. Augustus P. Blocksom, recently assigned to the 2d Cavalry, an officer who served with the army as a captain in the 6th Cavalry in Cuba, was wounded at Santiago, went to the Philippines, served through a campaign in the interior and later accompanied the army to China. He is one of the few officers in the army who have had the advantage, of serving everywhere the army has gone during the past where the army has gone during the past twenty years. His adjutant was First Lieut. Henry W. Parker. Lieut. Parker will shortly relinquish his duties here to enter the general staff college at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., to which he has been assigned. Troop H is commanded by Capt. Harry G. Trout, an officer of wide practical experience, whose knowledge of military science is such that he is regarded as one of the most thorough and efficient as one of the most thorough and eff instructors in the officers' school at For Myer. First Lieut. Walter F. Martin is second in command of Troop H, and Second Lieut, Charles McH. Eby of Troop F served with Troop H as second lieutenant in the absence of Second Lieut. Joseph F. Taulbee, who was detailed for special duty.

Up to a day or two before camp was struck at Leesburg Troop E was under comand of its captain, Capt. John P. Wade. Capt. Wade is one of the best known marksmen of the army, however, and was detailed as a member of the rifle team of the department of the east, to attend the rifle competitions at Fort Niagara, N. Y., and left the troop under the command of Lieut. Frank E. Lynch. Lieut. Lynch acted as the mess officer for the officers' mess also and was one of the most popular men in camp. Capt. Wilson, assessed that surgeon accompanied the squadron sistant surgeon, accompanied the squadron to Leesburg and remained with it until a few days before camp was struck. He, too, was detailed for special duty, however, and left the health of the command in the care of First Lieut. Foster, assistant surgeon, who has recently joined the medical corps detchment at Fort Myer.

Ordered to Bel Air, Md. The squadron left Fort Myer early in July and marched to Bel Air, Md., where they were ordered to go into camp with the Maryland National Guard. The troopers were encamped ten days at this place and were most hospitably received by the Maryland militiamen. Gen. Riggs and the mem-bers, both of his official and private familles, put themselves to no little trouble in showing the officers and men of the regular establishment what true Maryland hospitality meant. The efforts of Gen. Rilgs and his kinsmen to make the time pass pleas-antly with the regulars did not cease with the breaking of the militia camp. At Green in regular rows higher up. Springs Valley, Md., the country seat of Last Stage of Jon the Riggs family, the most lavish enter-tainment was prepared for Maj. Blocksom and his officers and they were pressed to spend several days at the place.

When the Maryland National Guard broke camp the cavalry detachment had received orders to go to Leesburg and participate in the encampment of the District soldiers. The local militia officers did not solders. The local milital officers did not expect the cavalry would put in an appearance for several days after the camp was pitched, but they were not acquainted with the manner in which the 2d Cavalry does business, for by the time the militiamen had their tents up the cavalry was in the field and putting up its tentage also. Major Blocksom's command was a valulems he set the militia to solving and the troopers were worked hard during the ten days they were in camp. Both officers and men conceived a wholesome respect for the militiamen and their work during the encampment and spoke with the highest praise for the soldierly appearance and bearing of the guardsmen. The work of the cavalrymen was not completed with the striking of the tents on George's farm last Saturday, however. A distance of about forty miles separated the troopers from their home station, and the lowering clouds did not give promise of a very delightful ride. Through the courtesy of the officers of the squadron a reporter for The Star rode to Fort Myer from Leesburg with the

A march such as that from Leesburg to Fort Myer, when there is no necessity for haste, is made in two days. It could be made in a day, but it would probably be hard on the horses. The average march of the cavalry arm is from twenty to twenty-five miles per day, the condition of the country through which it passes having a great deal to do with the speed attained. In the Geronimo campaign Gen. Lawton's troop of the 4th Cavalry was not able to make more than ten or fifteen miles some days and had to march both day and night to make that. But in that particular campaign some of the country traversed was well nigh impassable for the horses, and were not to be compared to the mountain trails in the Sierra Madre range or any of the southwestern country in point of rough-ness and impassability. The distance be-tween Leesburg and Fort Myer was va-riously estimated at from thirty to forty miles. The former figure was Major Block-som's estimate, and the natives of the country furnished the highest figures. Major Blocksom's estimate was made as a result of long experience with marching troops, and the other estimates were arrived at by the natives principally from what their fathers had told them. The cavalryman on the march carries with him everything that is necessary for his comfort on the march. His horse is equipped with a saddle, the ordinary bridle in use in service, a watering bridle with a snaffle bit and a halter. On the saddle he has a pair of saddle pockets, his saber and carbine. Strapped to the cantle is his shelter tent half, made into a neat roll, inside of which is placed his bedding changes of underwear, etc., and across changes of underwear, etc., and across the end of the roll is strapped the nosebag for his horse. If necessary, enough feed-for one meal may be carried in the nosebag. In this event the nosebag is detached from the tent roll, and after being securely tied to prevent the grain from spilling, is fastened to one of the rings, either on the cantle or pommel of the saddle. The saddle bags contain the currycomb and brush for the horse, and if necessary extra ammunition, on one side and comb and brush for the horse, and if neces-sary extra ammunition, on one side, and the man's personal tollet articles and such rations as he has issued him in the other. A tin cup holding a quart is fastened in one of the straps by which the saddle bags are closed and a canteen is fastened to one of the rings at the cantle of the saddle. will consist of about six long wagons, drawn by four horses and known as escort wagons. In these wagons is carried such of the personal baggage as the men are permitted to take in the field, the tentage and personal baggage of the officers and extra pieces of equipment. The wagons also contain rations for the men, picket lines, camp hitchens, etc. In the present state of perfection of equipment there is hardly any reason for a man not being as comfortable in the field as he is in his quarters in the garrison.

described above. They left Leesburg about 11 o'clock in the morning. The weather was bad. It had rained during the night, and for two days before, and the roads were muddy and slippery. A drizzle of rain was falling as a command filed out of the camp inclosure, and before it had proceeded a mile the drizzle turned into a steady downpour that made things very uncomfortable. Some of the men had rain coats or ponchos and some did not. Those who did not got gloriously wet. The pace was a walk throughout the march, but Major Blockson, who led the column had an extra fast walking horse and the rear of the column was put to its best to keep up with the commanding officer without taking the trot. The objective point Saturday was Dranesville, where camp was to be made for the night. It was to be a field camp throughout. Each man carried a shelter tent half, as has been explained, and two men button their halves together to make a whole tent, capable of accommodating the two men. and for two days before, and the roads lating the two men.

The first stop was made as soon as the rain slacked a little, and the horses were carefully examined to see that they were in good condition and that the saddles were not chafing them. The cavalryman's first duty is to his horse, for frequently his life depends on the animal's condition and intelligence. As soon as the horses and men were rested the command was mounted again, and but one more stop was made before Dranesville was reached. Major Blockson estimated the distance to be about twelve miles from Leesburg, and the horses made it in about three hours. The people who live in the vicinity call it fifteen miles.

The Camp at Dranesville. The commanding officer selected the camp site, on the left of the road, and the wo troops were marched in, the column being drawn up in a line, squadron front, near where the picket line was to be established. Without waiting for the wagons to come up the men immediately set As soon as the wagons arrived the long troop picket lines were unloaded and the horses were made comfortable. A detail of men was set to work putting up the tents for the officers, and within less than an hour after the command arrived at Dranesville camp was in order and a pip-ing hot dinner was on the fire for the men. At this camp the tents of the men were pitched in one long line, with an interval of about ten yards between the two troops. The picket line for the horses was opposite the troop to which each line belonged, with an interval of fifteen yards between the line of tents and the picket line.

The ground from the tents sloped down to a little ravine, and the picket line was on the other side of the ravine on the rising slope. Higher up this side, fifteen yards or more from the picket line were the troop kitchens.

The troop officers' tents were pitched about thirty yards behind and in the center of the line of the men's tents. The tents for the field officers, i.e., the major, adjutant and surgeon, were pitched on a line thirty yards from and at right angle to, the extreme right of the line of men's tents.
This is the habitual method of camping for a squadron cavalry. That is the general methods of pitching such a camp, the one most used permitting the tents of the field officers to be pitched in the rear of the troop officers' tents and the troop kitchens to be placed between the line of men's tents and the picket lines, with intervals of fifteen yards, if possible, a greater distance. Wherever camp is pitched the ground is selected which has a slope, and the picket lines are placed at the bottom of the slope with the tents for the men, &c.

their horses. Then they started grooming and after the animals were thoroughly cleaned and made comfortable, went to breakfast. After breakfast camp was struck and the command was on the road again by 6 o'clock. The march on Sunday was much better than it had been on the day before. There was no rain, although the roads were all as wet as they could be and were very slippery. The roads improved slightly on the way to Fort Myer, however, and were very good through Alexandria county. Three or four stops of ten minutes each were made along the road between Dranesville and Fort Myer, one of which was for the purpose of watering the horses. The command was drawn up in front of the administration building at Fort Myer shortly before 11 o'clock and Major Blockson re-ported his return to Col. Edgerly, post commandant. Col. Edgerly, with his adjutant. Capt. Thomas J. Lewis, then inspected the troops and the squadron was dismissed. The march through from Lees-burg had been made without incident or accident, and when the command arrived at Fort Myer it was in such good condition that it could have continued on the road for another four hours without injury to either horses or men and could have been kept in the field, if need be, for an indeficavalrymen and observed from the best nite time. Despite the fact that the squad-possible vantage point the manner in which ron had been away from Fort Myer al-cavalry of the United States army makes a most a month, there was not a horse in the most a month, there was not a horse in the outfit that needed the care of a veterinarian. Some of the troops will probably re-turn to Leesburg within the course of the next few weeks to complete the target prac-tice begun at Ordway earlier in the sum-

FIRST LODGE IN THIS CITY FORTY

Founded the Order.

YEARS AGO.

Project Laid Before the Old Arion Club -Six Hundred Thousand Members.

The order of the Knights of Pythias, which is the largest of the organizations of like character having a purely American membership, will be ferty years old February 19, 1904. It was founded at Marini's Hall in this city on that day of the month 1864. The five gentlemen who took the most prominent part in its organization were Justus Henry Rathbone, Robert A. Champion, Dr. E. S. Kimball, David L. Burnett and William H. Burnett. Messrs. Rathbone and Champion are long since dead. Messrs. Kimball and D. L. Burnett are living and members of the fraternity, the latter still very active in Calanthe Lodge, No. 11, of this jurisdiction. William H. Burnett, who has long been a clerk in the War Department, also survives, but is not now identified with the fraternity. Founder of the Order.

Justus Henry Rathbone is famous as the actual founder of the order, and the person to whose dramatic inspiration is due the most beautiful features of the Pythian ritual. He submitted the first draft of the ritual based on the story of Damon and Pythias to members of the old Arion Club, a musical organization which existed here in the later years of the civil war. From this small beginning sprang Washington Lodge, No. 1, K. of P., afterward merged in Franklin Lodge, No. 2, which is still in evidence. This latter lodge is the fruitful mother of nine thousand Pythian lodges now flourishing in fifty-four grand domains, and carrying upon their rosters an aggre-gate of nearly six hundred thousand mem-bers. There are also about fifty thousand of the knights who belong to the uniformed or military branch of the order, which is known as the "Army of the Lily."

Origin of the Idea. It has long been supposed and generally believed in this fraternity that the idea of great society based on the immortal story of the friendship of Damon and Pythias first came to Justus H. Rathbone while he was teaching school at the copper town of Eagle Harbor on the Keewenaw peninsula, Lake Superior, in 1860-1. Later Mr. Rathbone removed to Washington and became a clerk in the surgeon general's office here. He was a vocalist and ritualist of note, and his skill was displayed in many ways, but in none more notably than in his first draft of the Pythian ritual, which is recognized as remarkably beautiful and effective. Mr. Rathbone died at Lima, Ohio, in the residence of Past Supreme Chancellor Walter B. Ritchie about thirteen years ago. His name is venerated throughout the Pythian fraternity. Lodges Named for Him. There are lodges named for Mr. Rathbone in nearly every Pythian grand domain, and in some there are more than one. New York, for instance, has a Rathbone lodge, a Justus H. Rathbone lodge and a Founder Rathbone lodge. In this Last Stage of Journey.

Reveille sounded at 4:30 o'clock in the morning and at the first call the men fed diction. Superior Lodge, No. 27, also a prosperous lodge, and one which numbers among its membership many prominent public men and leading officials fraternities, owes its name to the circum stance, long supposed to be definitely es-tablished, that Justus H. Rathbone first conceived the Pythian story and outlined the ritual while a school teacher in the upper peninsula of Michigan, near the shores of Lake Superior.

As to Pythian History. But now a contention has arisen as to the accuracy of this Pythian history. The question is interesting to members of the fraternity everywhere. William D. Kennedy of Illinois, past grand chancellor and past supreme representative, one of the best informed members of this great and successful organization, is soon to publish a comprehensive history of the order. This a comprenensive history of the order. This history will state that Mr. Rathbone never wrote any part of the ritual, or even thought of it until he came to Washington. It will also assert that the Lake Superior origin of the ritual is merely an unwar-ranted tradition. In a letter Mr. Kennedy says: Mr. Kennedy's Views. "I am in possession of the evidence that Rathbone never thought about an order to be called 'Knights of Pythias' until the fall of 1863. He wrote no rough draft of the ritual up in Michigan. I have the evidence of three persons who know of the preparation of the ritual, when and where it was done, and that it was not until the fall of 1863 that he had picked up the name of the order. I have gone over this whole question, thoroughly investigating the 'school house' story, and have in my possession the letters of those who were with Rathbone at the time that he first went over the play of 'Damon and Pythias,' with view to using it as a foundation for the ritual." Mr. Kennedy is recognized as an earnest and painstaking historian. But there are a number of veteran Pythians still living here who do not accept his version in this particular. Another Version.

A letter written Historian Kennedy this week from here says: "Past Grand Chancellor and Past Supreme Representative Amos J. Gunning of old Mount Vernon Lodge, No. 5, one of our oldest and most honored Pythians, says that Rathbone told him that he wrote the ritual in Michigan. . Superior Lodge, No. 27, was organized here with the active participation of all the old-timers in Washington. Its name was declared and known by all to be based on the circumstance that Rathbone outlined or wrote the ritual while a school teacher near the shores of the mightlest of fresh water seas. All the living fathers of the order here took part, including those on whom you must needs rely for your information. Not one of them intimated at the time that Rathbone did not get his original ideas in northern Michigan and bring them east with him. • • It is also generally believed throughout the northwest that Rathbone thought out the Damon and Pythias story in Michigan. Very likely the secret society, its name and its orly the secret society, its name and its orvanization were after considerations."
